

LEEVE BREAKS AND OHIO IS STILL FLOODED

Cairo Is Inundated While East Columbus Is Reported Under From Four to Eight Feet of Flood Water

TROOPS WORKING TO SAVE TOWNS

Governor Cox Issues Statement That Relief Already Given Now Places State of Ohio In Position to Meet Crisis Alone

(A. P. Bulletin)

CARLO, April 1.—One of the levees broke here at one-thirty o'clock this morning.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH]
CARLO, March 31.—The inhabitants of Carlo had given up hope tonight for the safety of the city. Before night-fall the strong current was noticeable in the Ohio river. This gave rise to the opinion that something had given away south of here, and the situation which has been growing more and more desperate had been relieved.

The levee here has been holding strongly although the water has been creeping steadily upwards. A report reached here that the levee had broken at Shawneetown. It is thought that one of the levees on the Kentucky side may have gone out.

Anxiety is felt because of the drinking water supply which is decidedly bad.

The levee south from the big Illinois Central bridge over the Ohio river near Mound, Illinois is the scene of a battle with the flood.

For several miles along the railroad tracks, north, hundreds of laborers are filling sacks with sand. These are placed on flat cars and started with all speed toward the levee. The soldiers have been pressed into the service.

Another Levee Breaks
COULMBUS, Ky., March 31.—The Mobile and Ohio levee one fourth of a mile from here broke late today and East Columbus is flooded. The water is in the streets from four to eight feet deep.

Ohio to Fight Alone
COLUMBUS, O., March 31.—Refreshed by the tears of the American people, Ohio stands ready tonight to meet her crisis alone. This statement was issued by Gov. Cox, tonight shortly before the executive officer began to outline reconstructive legislation.

Ohio Begins to Recede
CINCINNATI, March 31.—When the Ohio here reaches the stage 63.7, which is expected about midnight, the crest of the flood at this point will have been reached. The stage late today was 63.5 feet.

At points east of here the river already has begun to recede, but to the west the reports are replete with stories of destruction and desolation. Direct and indirect damage caused here by flooding of the river front section and low-lying residences will be great. The direct loss is estimated at more than $2,000,000.

Relief and provisions of the local, and also nearby inundated territory are more adequate, was the statement issued today by Mayor Hunt, and no more supplies are required here.

Across the river from here, in several Kentucky towns, which practically form one large city, conditions are still deplorable, and all are without light.

Aeroplane Useless Here
SOUTH DAYTON, March 31.—Orville Wright, who like thousands of other Daytonites was engaged today shoveling mud from his home, said there was no chance to use an aeroplane when the flood came.

When the warning was received, his father, Bishop Wright, and his sister, Katherine, left the Wright home in a wagon. In some way they became separated and for two days the inventor could not find his father, who, however, experienced no mishap. Orville Wright fled soon after his father and sister, and found refuge on high ground.

Fire broke out near the old shop where the Wright brothers worked many years perfecting flying machines, but did not reach the shop and its valuable contents.

A court martial was organized today with forty petty cases on the docket. The court must try such cases as the municipal justice courts are superseded under martial law. Reports of looters being shot are untrue, according to statements of those in authority.

Parkersburg Recovering
PARKERSBURG, March 31.—This city made some recovery today from the worst disaster in its history caused by the ravages of the Ohio river. The

THE BUOYANT SPRING

How the spirit of the buoyant spring stirs in the April air! Earth and sky are palpitant with prophecy and expectation. Now in very truth has come our resurrection season, the time of our renewing. Our hearts beat to a quicker rhythm, our hopes build castles higher than the towers of Spain, our arms are strong like iron, our souls dare all and daring half achieve. In our confident joy we see visions and dream dreams that lift us to the very gates of God's own heaven. Yet we may not abide content within our dreaming, our lagging hands must do the bidding of our eager hearts. We are fain for the golden summer of doing, of helping, fulfilling, and in the end for joy of dreams come true.

Baker Not Only One Of the Crocker Men To Be Prosecuted

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH]
SAN FRANCISCO, March 31.—Federal prosecution of the frauds by which the Crocker National Bank lost $200,000 will not cease with the case against William F. Baker, the assistant cashier who confessed to embezzling a sum approximating $200,000. United States Attorney McNab announced today that he will lay before the federal grand jury evidence tending to show that brokers with whom Baker traded—among them some of the best known firms in the city—were guilty of criminal conspiracy to loot the funds of the federal depository.

The federal bank examiner has been of the opinion previously that no prosecution would stand but McNab believes he can make out a case under the federal statutes. Under the state law only a suit for restitution seemed possible. It will be contended that the brokers were well informed of Baker's financial rating and that they must have known he could not, as an individual, handle accounts the size he carried for a number of years.

ROUMANIA WILL CLAIM SLICE

In View of Capture of Adrianople by Bulgaria Little Country Will Demand Another Rectification of the Frontier.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH]
BUCHAREST, March 31.—Ex-President P. P. Carp leader of the conservative party of the Roumanian parliament, reported it is said today in view of the capture of Adrianople by Bulgaria the claims of Roumania for rectification of the frontier now would include the territory within a line drawn from Turtukal on the Danube, twenty-eight miles west of Silistria to Balchik, twenty-three miles north of Varna on the Black Sea. This means taking in a considerable slice of Bulgarian territory.

If necessary, said the statesman, Roumania will resort to arms to enforce her demands.

Turks Meet Montenegrins
CETTINJE, March 31.—Turks made a sortie today from the southern side of Tarabosch. They came in contact with Montenegrin infantry, supported by cavalry. A desperate engagement ensued and was still in progress this evening.

Cossacks Ride Men Down
ST. PETERSBURG, March 31.—"Don't think this is Vienna" cried a crowd gathered in front of the Serbian legation today to listen to a speech by the Serbian minister to Russia. Protest was made against the Russian police who ruthlessly rode the people down.

The Russian government had issued rigorous orders to suppress any outbursts which exceeded the limits of official sympathy with the Balkan allies. Many demonstrators were injured.

The Anti-Austrian feeling was very keen among the demonstrators who attempted to reach the Austro-Hungarian embassy. Great crowds marched in that direction, shouting "Down With Austria," but the police were drawn up across the approaches and drove the mobs back, using their whips freely.

Without distinction of party or class bitter indignation prevails against the action of the police in charging the crowds and using whips to suppress the pro-Slav demonstrations.

Before departure for Bulgaria, General Dimitrieff, commander of the Bulgarian forces which captured Kirkiliseh, was given an ovation. He said the allies at the outset of the war did not aim at the occupation of Constantinople but they might be forced to adopt this motive unless Turkey acceded to their demands.

ONE MORE STEP TO STRENGTHEN HUERTA REGIME

Vasquez Gomez, Self-Declared Provisional President of Mexico, Is Fugitive in United States After Salazar Deserts Him

OROZCO, SENIOR, IS EXECUTED

Uncle Sam Is Well Satisfied Conditions Are Righting Themselves; He Has Withdrawn the Battleship Nebraska

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH]
EL PASO, March 31.—Vasquez Gomez, self-declared provisional president of Mexico, arrived here today alone. General Jose Inez Salazar, whose rebel forces composed his only military following, has accepted the Huerta national government.

Gomez was named as president in the plan of Tacubaya, an amendment of the original Madero program made at San Luis Potosi. Now he is a refugee in the United States with no apparent political or military following.

"I only want peace in my country," said Gomez, dejectedly. Salazar's ex-rebels control the entire Casas Grandes district.

Hearing that Salazar had espoused the presidential claims of Gomez, Huerta a few days ago telegraphed the rebel general for immediate decision on his stand. Salazar altered his former policy and agreed to accept Huerta should he be given the Casas Grandes district. The transaction was consummated today.

Pascual Orozco, Sr., has been executed by Emiliano Zapata, the rebel leader of Southern Mexico, according to advices received by friends here. Orozco several days ago visited Zapata's stronghold as a peace missionary from the Huerta government.

Withdraw Battleship
WASHINGTON, March 31.—Conditions in Mexico, at least on the Gulf Coast and near the capital have become sufficiently reassuring to warrant the United States withdrawing some of the naval force maintained at Vera Cruz and Tampico during the last two months. The battleship Nebraska, at Tampico, was ordered today to the Boston navy yards for an overhauling.

Governor Carranza, heading the revolution in the north, has declared himself provisional president, according to official advices today.

SUMMER WHITE HOUSE
President Wilson Prepares to Occupy Churchill Home in Hampshire

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH]
CORNISH, N. H., March 31.—Harlakenden House on the Winston Churchill estate, which will be occupied by President Wilson this summer, will be ready for his occupancy by the middle of April. The work of renovation was begun today.

The house contains about thirty rooms, of which sixteen are sleeping chambers. It is only two stories high except on the west end, where the precipitous side cliff makes possible an additional story under the ground floor.

Churchill's study is on the lower floor side toward the Connecticut river. It is expected that the president will use this room as an office. Besides the study, there are two cottages, commodious stables and a garage. The cottages, where the clerical staff will be lodged, are about an eighth of a mile from the house.

SCHOONER BOTTOM UP
Three Masted Vessel Is Derelict Off Point Reyes

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH]
SAN FRANCISCO, March 31.—The three masted schooner, John D. Spreckels, of this port, is a derelict tonight, drifting bottom side up off Point Reyes and the fate of the vessel's crew is unknown. She carried a captain and seven men. The information was received by wireless from the United States revenue cutter McCulloch which is standing by the wreck.

The Spreckels is a cod-fisher and was homeward bound from Uniga, Alaska, and may have had canny hands aboard besides the crew. The schooner was owned by the Alaska Codfish company, and was two hundred sixty-seven tons burden.

His resignation was accepted, and congress will appoint a successor. Ill health was given as the reason for the archbishop's action. Quiet prevails throughout the country.

LEGISLATURE MAY BE CALLED ONCE AGAIN

Indications Around State House Point to One More Session; Code Bills Crowd Calendar and Everyone Overworked

The present session of the state legislature will not complete its task within the three days that remain of the present session. Neither house can get through this was admitted yesterday. For some time the house has been in this frame of mind, being mindful of the crowded condition of the calendar. But the senate has insisted all the time that they could get through, and complete their task. Yesterday however they became convinced themselves, with more than half a hundred bills still on the calendar, and still more code bills to be introduced that it will be impossible to complete the business by the end of the sixty days.

This was the common talk around both the house and senate yesterday. However there were a number of the members, even those who were more violently anti-administration during the session who actually announced their willingness to stay until Saturday without pay if it were possible for them to complete the business on the calendar. Even this is despaired of however now. It was quite a peculiar experience to hear members of the house who were last session positive that no member should serve another day after the expiration of the sixty days without pay, declaring that the legislature ought to stay a day or two to finish up the work. It will be remembered that the attitude of the governor and a number of his advisors last year urged that the legislature stay a few days over the time in order to complete the task. This was scoffed at by many however, and as the large majority of the appropriations had not been passed the special session was called.

It now looks, as if history, at least that part relating to the special session will repeat itself this year. There is a large amount of work on the calendar of both houses to be attended to, the most important of which outside of the appropriation bills, are the code bills. On Saturday the senate began to fear some undefined big stick methods from somewhere with regard to the passage of bills, especially those code bills which were sent over from

MR. MORGAN'S IDEAS AS HE DEFINED THEM TO PUJO COMMITTEE

I don't like short selling, but I don't want to criticize it. I don't see how you can stop it. Nobody went on the board of directors of the steel corporation over my protest. There is no way in the world you can make a trust on money. If a man came to me today and offered me forty-five times the value of the Equitable stock he wouldn't get it. I know men who could come into my office and get a check for a million when I know they haven't a cent. The man I couldn't trust could not get money from me if he had all the bonds in Christendom. Credit depends on the man. There is no way one man can get a monopoly or control of money.

Assuming a man had such control, when he abuses it he loses it. Nobody has what you call a "money trust," or anything of that kind.

I don't think I could carry any proposition through any board of directors against the wishes of the stockholders. I like a little competition, but I like combination better. I do not favor legislation that would prevent speculation. I approve of speculation if it is legitimate.

You cannot prevent the public buying anything they think is low and selling anything they think is high.

I want to get a little nearer to you Mr. Counsel. I am getting deaf as I am getting old.

Mrs Pankhurst Says Jail Bars Cannot Hold Her

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH]
LONDON, March 31.—"If I am not at the Albert hall meeting on April 10, it will be because the authorities have discovered a way of keeping me alive by force or because I am dead," Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst told a meeting of militant suffragettes this afternoon.

Mrs. Pankhurst reminded the suffragettes that her trial on a charge of inciting persons to commit malicious damage to property would begin Wednesday.

"My conviction," she continued, "is certain whether I am sent to prison for a short or long period, and with or without hard labor makes no difference. I look upon myself as a prisoner of war. I am not bound by any moral obligation. I shall terminate the imprisonment at the earliest possible moment."

MORGAN BEFORE COMMITTEE ON "MONEY TRUST"

His Examination and Replies Made the Affair Most Spectacular and Unprecedented of Congressional Investigations

The examination of Morgan on December 18 and 19 of last year, before the Pujo "money trust" investigating committee, was classed as the most spectacular and unprecedented in the history of congressional investigations. "I don't feel I have the vast power you claim," was the assertion of Mr. Morgan, and professing ignorance of the details of many financial transactions involving millions in which his firm played a part, all the while denying absolutely the existence of a money trust. Mr. Morgan proved the most interesting and probably least informing witness called by Chairman Pujo.

The shaggy browed, sharp eyed, florid faced financier, dominating and yet not dominating, was a picture of animation on the witness stand. Some times he laughed the table in front of him; again he swung half round in his revolving chair, glancing at his numerous counsel apparently for approbation, and again he leaned forward within a few feet of Samuel Untermyer, attorney for the committee, who shot questions at him with relentless rapidity.

Mr. Morgan spoke often in epigrams. He had "forgotten" or "did not know" much about the details wanted by the committee, but he was unresponsive when it came to generalities. His attitude throughout was that of a philosophical financier.

Toward the latter part of the hearing Mr. Morgan's mood became extremely cordial, and his repartee at times amusing. The crowd laughed, and occasionally Mr. Morgan joined in. He sat at the end of the long committee table, and after making a telling point the great banker would turn his back abruptly on the committee members and look into the faces of his daughter, Mrs. H. L. Satterlee, her husband, and the half dozen Morgan attorneys present.

Mr. and Mrs. Satterlee plainly showed their anxiety over the financier's ordeal, and were evidently fearful he might not stand the strain of the long inquiry. At one time he turned to his daughter and asked for a throat remedy, as continuous talking was wearing on his throat. His

WIZARD MORGAN FINANCE KING DIES IN ROME

New York Banker, Broker and Philanthropist Succumbs to General Collapse Following Nervous Prostration While Abroad

END WAS NOT UNEXPECTED

For Five Days He Had Been Receiving Artificial Nourishment But Was Unable to Assimilate; Dying of Starvation

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH]
ROME, March 31.—J. Pierpont Morgan, the New York financier, died here today a few minutes after noon. For months his health has been declining, but the symptoms became greatly aggravated a week ago and since Wednesday last he has been in a semi-comatose condition.

Tonight his body is lying in the death chamber, surrounded by flowers. Messages of sympathy were received from King Victor Emmanuel, high officials of state, diplomatic representatives and personal friends from all parts of the world.

The death of Morgan was not known in Rome until several hours after it had occurred, owing to the desire of Morgan's son, J. P. Morgan, Jr., who is in New York, to be first notified.

The official statement prepared by Dr. Giuseppe Bastianelli, Dr. Alton Starr and Dr. George A. Dixon, attending physicians, indicated that a gradual general collapse followed a condition of nervous prostration, which prevented the digestive organs performing their functions and affected the mental faculties.

For five days Morgan has received artificial nourishment, but was unable to assimilate food. He lost strength rapidly. A condition of semi-coma prevailed and prevented him from recognizing those about him for many hours prior to his death. The end was without suffering.

Morgan's daughter, Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, who has been in constant attendance at the death bed, tried to obtain some sign of recognition. It is thought when the supreme moment came, he faintly pressed her hand. A condition of semi-coma prevailed and prevented him from recognizing those about him for many hours prior to his death. The end was without suffering.

All the Rome newspapers publish tributes to Morgan expressing their deep sense of the loss felt by the Italian people. It suggested that Morgan's body be taken to the United States aboard a warship.

Resting Place of Morgan
NEW YORK, March 31.—The last resting place of John Pierpont Morgan, who died in Rome today, will probably be in the mausoleum at Cedar Hill cemetery, Hartford, Conn., which he erected some years ago in the memory of his father and mother. It is expected the funeral will be held in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, toward the construction of which Morgan was a large contributor.

In the financial district the stock exchange and consolidated exchange adopted resolutions of respect for Morgan's memory and flags everywhere were dropped to half mast.

The offices of Morgan and Company were closed immediately upon receipt of the news and little information was vouchsafed by the members of the firm.

Throughout the day equipages of all kinds drove up to the Morgan mansion, and the occupants left cards of condolence. The morbid gathered in force in the vicinity of the Morgan home, and at one time it was necessary for the police to disperse them.

Henry H. Davidson, now senior member of J. P. Morgan and Company, said today with the exception of two disapproving announcements, the death of Morgan, no word had been received from Rome. Davidson said there probably will be a family conference tomorrow at which details of the funeral will be worked out.

The immediate effect of Morgan's death on the machinery of Wall street was comparatively slight. Morgan's illness prepared the financial district for the end and every precaution was taken to guard against a serious break in prices.

At the opening of the stock exchange prominent stocks declined one point or so but received prompt support, and rallied quickly. Thereafter the market was dull.

MORGAN'S LOSS FELT
PHILADELPHIA, March 31.—Market conditions were not so disturbed by the death of J. Pierpont Morgan.
